

Jeanne McCaffery, PhD, joined the Department of Allied Health Sciences at the University of Connecticut in 2017. Her research interests focus on the interplay of genetic, genomic and environmental contributors to obesity, diabetes and cardiovascular disease risk. She has published over eighty empirical articles and has served a principal investigator or co-investigator on multiple grant awards from the National Institutes of Health.